Lifestyles

Road night in Kelley. The cackling chicks emerge from their caves and their squacks reverberate the length of the hall. It must be the dinner hour. After trucking on down to the cafeteria, you find the way is blocked by a throng of solemn girls. As in a doctor's waiting room, everyone is standing. Someone up ahead gives a signal and the huge mass surges forward, carrying you toward the mysterious odors which emanate from the cafeteria. When your body has been refueled, you trudge back to your room and get ready to flee Muskingum.

Once in your room you flick the light switch. Nothing. Evidently, the janitor was too busy riding his mop through the shower stalls to attend to such a mundane chore as tinkering with a switch. You turn on a study light instead and watch while another poster peels slowly off the wall. However, each petty irritation only makes you more determined to escape. You attend to your preparations in the pale light, meanwhile wondering vaguely whether it's the radiator or the girl upstairs that sounds like Tiny Tim. Suddenly the box goes off. "Call on fifteen." You sprint to the other end of the hall skidding past the water fountain, dodging three dogs, and narrowly missing two girls who won't get out of the way — only to find it's your friend from 3rd floor who called instead of walking down to ask for some advice. You hang up quickly and trudge back to your room only to hear a throaty male voice greet you with, "Well hello there." Groaning inwardly, you grit your teeth in a smile, resolve to kill your roommate tomorrow, grab your clothes, and head for the bathroom. At last. Preparations completed. You scribble your name on the parole request, known in the dorm as a key sheet, and scurry for freedom.

Eight hours later. The party is over. Even the Caseloma is closed and it's time to return to Kelley. Unfortunately, the clock reads five minutes before the hour. You race desperately to the car and burn up your tires trying to get back in on time — only to see the Security Guard faintly retreating toward his distant lair. For ten minutes you pace the porch. Frustration sets in. After all the doors and windows and cursing about the burglar kit you almost bought, you resort to the only method which evokes Ali Babba's genii. Busily you gather stones and heave them at the first lighted window. Picking the wrong lamp can gain you a free trip to Judiciary Board; which, of course, is preferable to pneumonia or to the mad rapist (either of which can be caught lurking in the foggy night). If you're lucky and the girl isn't a Rip Van Winkle or a Resident Advisor, she comes to the window and says, "I'll let you in the front." You stagger back to the porch and wait. After an eternity, a sleep-drugged figure appears, scowls, pushes open the door, and rapidly fades into Kelley's vast interior. You cross off your key in order to avoid a parole violation, and then head for the rack. In the dorm, another night has ended.

Abode. Quarters for the duration. Small and separate, like some sagging remnant of a tree fortress come crashing to earth. 'Jesus, it's cold in here.' 'Yeah? But this is spring, man. You shoulda come down here in the WINTER.' Quiet dark insides. Noise invades only when willed and wanted. Coming and going, together or separately, as we wish. Eating and sleeping, and patching holes in the roof leaking on our heads. And going to and coming from and going, making groggy transit down and up class hill. And water. Somebody cares. I mean, look how OFTEN the sky cries for us. And music, so . . . different, when you make your own.

And yes. Joining too as a part of the general groaning choir, singing snatches, with all the rest, of that mighty ancient chorus:

Can't wait till I'm Outta Here.
Wastin' time. Gonna get, gonna do,
There is just NOTHING to do HERE.
The people?
The people here SUCK, man.
I mean, like it's so POLARIZED
And nobody gives a SHIT,
Like because they HATE it HERE, and . . .

and Sandy's hair plastered down, framing foggy glasses, and Mark, shirt front up, beating out delicate rhythms on his ribcage and I there too, in the house small, rain pinging off the roof. And it, IT hitting us unawares, so silently. 'Ya know, we have everything here.' Well, not quite everything, but

WE LIKE IT HERE . . . grinning and laughing, eating and shouting, fighting, reading, learning, and healthy and young. Because it's right now, and right NOW . . . (as seen in the eyes of the old man. We stood by his bed, we three, silently, lest we disturb his reverie. And in the depths under the twin pools filling them, his eyes told us of a life of waiting and saving, and now infinite, raging regret and loss) . . . IS REALLY ALL we've got.

Dylan said something once about people not living life but just sort of investing in it. I don't think we're pretending to be blithe spirits, running about naked in some wild celebration of it all. No such luck. We were suckled on security and housebroken by a diabolical interpretation of the alphabet. But if we can laugh, even sometimes, at visions of some impossible DESTINY to be decided by A's, C's, & F's, and if the prospect of butcher, baker, and moneymaker, begins to lose some of its glitter when confronted by a blank beyond, then we may be able to have a little FUN living.

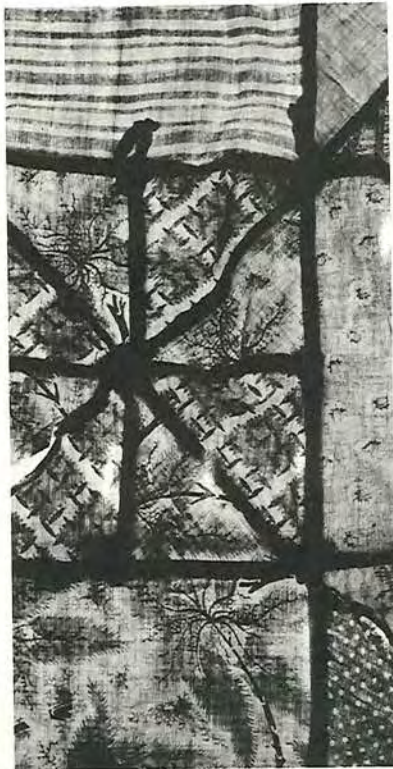

'This EDUCATIONAL PROCESS is enough to make you PARANOID. Do you think we could be learning something?' 'I dunno, but I'm having the best damn time of my life.' Me too. Now. And there's no sense cursing it, because we're here. In THIS place, now. Abode.

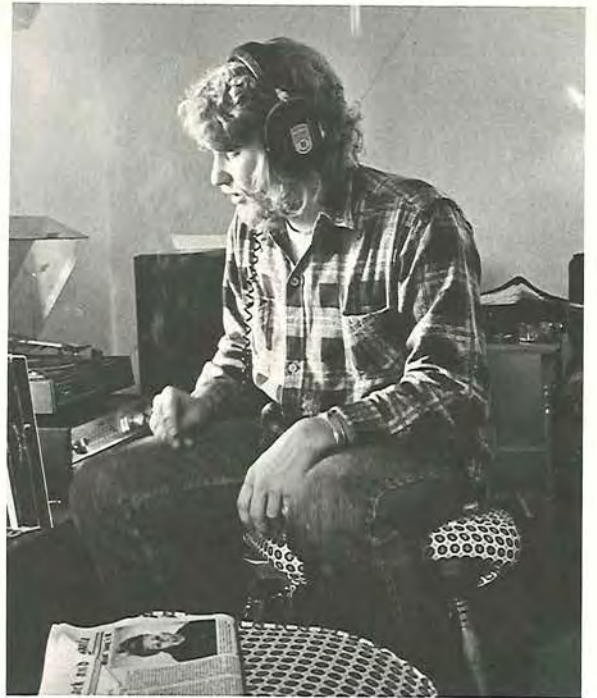

M.E.

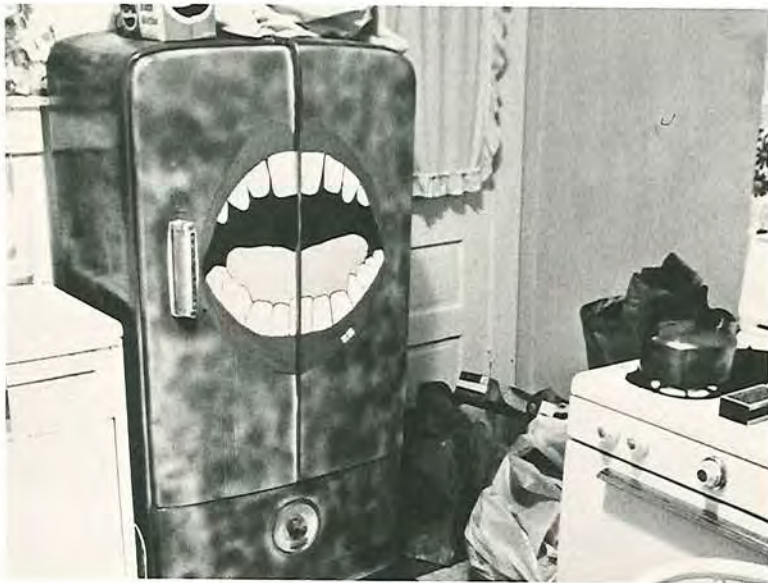

Originally discovered engraved onto the third stall of a Cambridge Hall Men's restroom.

A day in the life of a club house.

Most of all I think it's the showers . . .

All that water, the only problem is that it gets too hot. What else could you expect from three huge water heaters?

In the morning or at midnight . . . all that clean, ever so clean water just washing everything, so much water . . . it could drain the ressie.

Yes, I think most of all it's the showers.

But then there's the parties . . .

Parties are mainly noise . . . loud bands and everything and everybody moving yet nobody hearing anything but the noise.

Then a break and "hey, how about a drink . . . let me take you away from all of this" and who knows what else . . . except fifteen people crammed into a cement room 14 X 20 and making more noise.

Laughing.

Laughing at anything. Laughing at everything.

And guzzling beer and laughing still more, then back out into the noise and on and on . . .

Most of all I think it's the morning after . . .

The morning after is so quiet.

And beer cans.

Beer cans.

Beer cans in the hall, beer cans on the table, beer cans on the chairs . . . all half full or spilled and sticky.

The morning after is sticky and the Sunday paper.

Grins. Some based on fact, others on invention, but everyone grinning a story and oh boy did you see ol' what's his name with the four dancers from the Casa-loma and the six Delts in the . . . Sharing.

Maybe most of all it's the sharing.

Lord knows one has to share.

Sharing good times and bad times and no times at all.

Somehow it's easier when you attack together.

And then there's the fort.

Eating in the fort.

But . . . no, it's not eating in the fort.

The housemother.

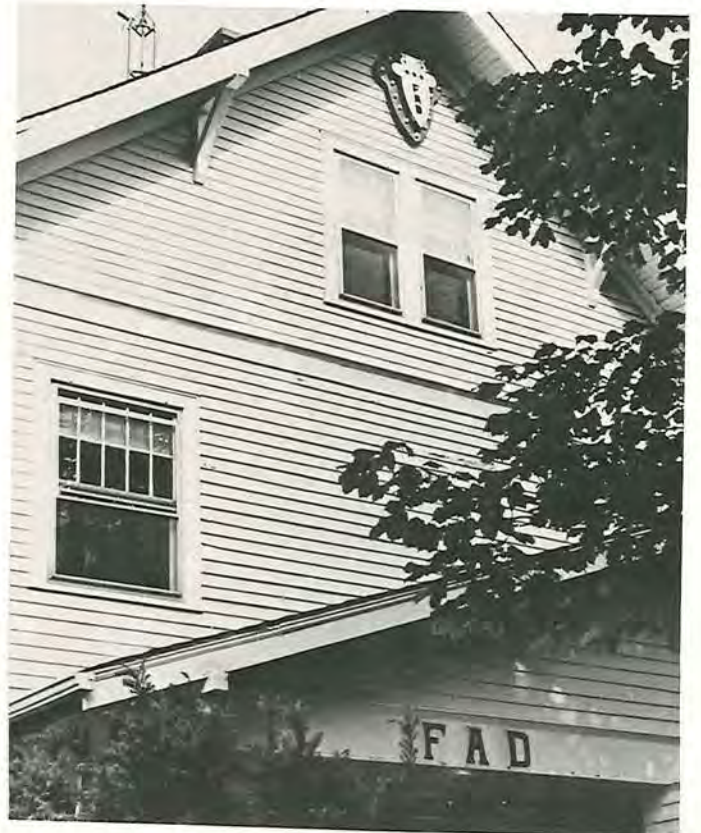

No. It's not the housemother.

Most of all I think it's the showers.

... an art ... weary of its puny exploits, weary of pretending to be able, of being able, of doing a little better the same old thing, of going a little further along a dreary road ... and preferring the expression that there is nothing to express, no desire to express, together with the obligation to express ...

ELECTIONS '72

The presidential campaign of 1972 was of major interest to students everywhere. In an effort to compensate for a lack of direct contact with any campaign machinery, WMCO organized its first Washington Press Corps. With the aid of Student Senate financing, Muskingum students were offered a personalized view of election night.

Our first stop was the Bureau of Indian Affairs building, then occupied by protesting Indians. We were excited to be involved in a national news event, but felt a bit awkward and out of place standing next to Indians who had come thousands of miles in protest.

Eventually we established our operations at the Washington Hilton ballroom. Several main speakers addressed the huge crowd there, notables such as Jean Westwood, chairwoman of the Democratic party, and vice-presidential candidate Shriver.

Many necessary things had been said. Our feeling upon leaving was one of expectation. Someday, the youth present in that ballroom would be in the power structure of America.

A black and white photograph showing a hand holding a wooden stick over a body of water. The stick is positioned diagonally from the bottom left towards the center. The water surface is covered in concentric ripples, suggesting a recent disturbance. The background is a textured, slightly grainy surface, possibly a wall or a large piece of paper. The overall mood is contemplative and artistic.

So you really think you know what this place is? You've already told me why you are here, and why you are staying or why you are going. As for me, I'm finished and I'm leaving. And, oh yes ... I'm happy/sad over the occasion. I'm glad it's over and I'm glad we did it.

This 1972-1973 Muskingum College yearbook was printed by Wm. J. Keller Co. on 100 pound Velva Brite stock with black ink. It contains 264 pages bound with 160 point board and covered with bookcloth in a limited edition of 1,200 copies.

Editor and Head Photographer: Mark Daniels
Assistant Editor: Ellen Barker
Copy Editor and Ads: Steve Davison
Menial Labor and Future Editor: Bridgette Turner

Many thanks must go out to ...

John Urian, yearbook representative (knows his stuff)

Dr. Anderson, advisor and indirect inspirational influence again to Ellen, such a hard working kid, I can't get over it

Steve, who works in spurts of free time

Willard, you should have stuck around ...

Tim Hutchinson, Pamela Williams and Mat Elli, for their short essays and of course Muskingum's student body, for making this book possible ... Thank you.
